Art of Selling Movies Sep 01 2022 Presenting 60 years of newspaper advertising for motion pictures great and small, this book features ads created by Hollywood and adapted by local and regional exhibitors that motivated patrons to leave their homes, part with precious income, and spend time in the dark. Because of the high stakes involved, theater operators used wildly creative means to make that happen. They made movie advertising equal parts art and psychology, appealing to human instinct in an effort to push product and keep their theatres in business. From the pen-and-ink masterpieces of the 1920s and 30s to location-specific folk art to ad space jam-packed with enticements for every member of the family, this book dissects the psyche of the American movie-going public and the advertisers seeking to push just the right button.

Starfleet cadet James T. Kirk first meets a Vulcan named Spock, and earns the Captain's chair of the Starship Enterprise. The film quickly became a critical and commercial smash hit worldwide, as audiences — confirmed Trekkers and alike — thrilled to a state-of-the-art action epic which both respected the legacy of Gene Roddenberry's archetypal myth and forged ahead into an exciting future of its own. Star Trek: The Art of the Film is a lavishly illustrated book that traces that new vision, tracing the evolution of the movie's look through a stunning array of previously unseen pre-production paintings, concept sketches, costume and set designs, unit photography and final frames. Written by New York Times bestselling author Mark Cotta Vaz in close co-operation with the film's production team, and including a Foreword by J.J. Abrams, this is the essential companion to the film.

PosterSpy Jul 19 2021 Way before the advent of social networks, the first, and sometimes only, visual contact you had with a movie was its poster. To return to this enlightened approach and escape the hard selling, marketing-driven posters of today's releases, this book pays tribute to the artists who celebrate the era when cinematographic posters made their mark. Presented by ARTtitude, this collaboration features the contemporary work of 58 different artists from the PosterSpy community, one of the most influential groups devoted to alternative posters. The nearly 300 posters presented a diverse range of genres and eras, from pop culture favorites like Star Wars and Goonies to the Wes Anderson film noir, horror and sci-fi classics. Each piece reveals intensely creative and detailed representations of films that ask the viewer to see the film in a new way and challenges the visual package included with the original release.

The Art of Film Projection: A Beginner's Guide Jul 29 2022 The history of cinema is full of love stories, but none has been as essential as the love between projectionists and their machines. The Art of Film Projection-A Beginner's Guide is a comprehensive outline of the materials, equipment, and knowledge needed to present the magic of cinema to an audience. Part manual and part manifesto, this book compiles more than fifty years of expertise from the staff of the renowned George Eastman Museum and the students of the L. Jeffrey Selznick School of Film Preservation into an authoritative and accessible guide to film projection ever produced. No film comes to life until it is shown on the screen, but with the proliferation of digital movie theaters, the expertise of film projection has become rare. Written for the casual enthusiast and the professional projectionist in training, this book demystifies the process of film projection and provides an in-depth understanding of the aesthetic, technical, and historical features of motion pictures. Join in the fight for the authentic experience of seeing motion pictures on film.

Alternative Movie Posters Sep 20 2021 Over the years the motion picture industry has (sadly) gravitated to generally poorly cropped and heavily airbrushed posters that rely far too often on celebrity head shots. Minding Movies Sep 28 2019 David Bordwell and Kristin Thompson are two of America's preeminent film scholars. It would be hard pressed to find a serious student of the cinema who hasn't spent at least a few hours huddled with them for a seminal introduction to the field—Film Art, now in its ninth edition—or a cable television junkie unaware that the two have graced Bordwell and Thompson's blog. Informal pieces, conversational in tone but grounded in three decades of authoritative research, the essays gathered here range from in-depth analyses of individual films such as Slumdog Millionaire and Inglourious Basterds to adjustments of Hollywood media claims and forays into cinematic humor. For Bordwell and Thompson, the most fruitful place to begin is how movies are made, how they work, and how they are marketed. Written for film lovers, these essays—on topics ranging from Borat to blockbusters and back again—will delight current and gain new enthusiasts. Serious but not solemn, vibrantly informative without condescension, and above all illuminating, Minding Movies offers ideas sure to set film lovers thinking—and keep them returning to the silver screen.

Film as Art Oct 10 2020 "More than half a century since its initial publication, this deceptively compact book remains among the most incisive analyses of the formal and perceptual dynamics of cinema. No one who cares about film should remain ignorant of its insights and wisdom. As digital technology fundamentally alters motion pictures, the book as Art commend themselves as excellent insurance against reinventing the wheel in the new media landscape and progress."—Edward Dimendberg author of Film Noir and the Spaces of Modernity "After more than eight decades, Arnheim's small book of film theory remains one of the essential works in defining film art, understanding film less as reproducing the world than as opening up new possibilities for formal play and unexpected imagery. Anyone serious about film, whether scholar, filmmaker or simply a lover of cinema, must take Arnheim seriously."—Tom Gunning, author of Films of Fritz Lang and D.W. Griffith and the Origins of American Narrative Film "An aesthetic theory based on the 'limitations' of the medium, Arnheim's Film as Art always provokes students in an age of few limits and less formalism; they argue and engage this classic text with unparalleled passion. Written in the wake of sound's transformation of cinema, Arnheim's essays are not only central to understanding a major historical moment in theoretical debates but also constitutes the 'essence' of film, but also are a must read for anyone seeking a lucid, detailed, and rigorous argument on how works of art emerge from expressive constraint as much as expressive freedom."—Vivian Sobchack, author of Thoughts

The Art of Film Design Feb 23 2022 John Box had one of the most continuously productive design careers in British cinema, winning a record for Academy Awards and four BAFTAs. After learning his craft in the 1950s, he shot to fame with Lawrence of Arabia (1962). Directors from David Lean and Carol Reed to Norman Jewison and Michael Mann have valued his experience, as he brought 'a vocabulary of life' to bear on the new challenges posed by each film. Whether creating the Welsh valleys in Wales for The Inn of the Sixth Happiness (1958), revolutionary Russia in Spain for Dr. Zhivago (1965), or Dickensian London for Oliver! (1968), imagining the mythic past in First Knight (1995) or the future in Rollerball (1975). Box's on-screen worlds across five decades, helping to establish the traditions of British production design which continue to this day. His greatest wish was that his career should encourage others by example. Based on interviews with John Box and the operation of some of his key collaborators, this lavishly colour-illustrated book focuses on solutions to design problems and provides a unique insight into the production designer's role in the collaborative business of filmmaking.
